The ISSUES

How to . . .

- ⇒ Get kids to bed easily.
- ⇒ Get kids up and dressed without hassle.
- ⇒ Get kids to wear their seat belts — voluntarily!
- ⇒ Quiet fussing and fighting in the car.
 - ⇒ Arrest the whining habit.
- ⇒ Quiet temper tantrums — safely.
- ⇒ Turn stubbornness into willingness.
- ⇒ Reduce bath time resistance to zero.
- ⇒ Use the “me first” or “I had it first” syndrome as great building blocks for courtesy.
- ⇒ Turn rudeness into gentleness.
- ⇒ Encourage individuality and assertiveness in the compliant child.
- ⇒ Why the behavior that you are trying to stop ends up staying the same or even gets worse!
- ⇒ What to do when your child says “no” to YOU, or worse — sasses back.

NOW, HERE'S THE GREAT PART . . .

It's all done with positive methods.

(No coaxing, bribing, counting, scolding, shouting, swatting, swearing or threatening!)

LowStress is the keyword.

The Payoff? A strong, positive inner person in your child.

The outcome?

Great relationships with the kids — even during the teen years — because you are using positive, nurturing corrections that build — rather than destroy — respect and friendship!

The PRESENTERS

Few parents question their children's need for direction and discipline. The big question is what kind, when and how much???

Everyone marvels at how fast a child learns during his first five years. Yet, as a society, we have largely failed to apply that remarkable learning power to children's behavior during the early years.

Is it any wonder that parents are frustrated? You want to enjoy your children, but they are often a major frustration -- even a heartache. You want to discipline, but you're afraid of rejection, getting into trouble yourself or, worse, harming the very ones you love most.

Believe it or not, we've been there -- done that. (We had four kids of our own.) But, because our vocation has kept us with preschoolers, we have had the opportunity to learn some wonderful low-stress -- and refreshingly effective -- ways of working with children.

Now, we hope you will give us the opportunity to share with you what we wish someone had shared with us when we were young parents! Here's a chance to lighten your load, to find confidence, to discover new joy & success with children.

Sincerely,

Cal & Carolyn Richert

the way you talk to a child.*

Some of the STRATEGIES

QUIET CORRECTION (The Power of Quiet)

Have you listened to the number of corrections you offer your kids in a day's time. Here's a way to cut your corrective words in half...and accomplish more than all those extra words ever did.

THE PERFECT CHOICE

Children need — and love — choices. But we adults often fail to remember that when a child offers resistance to our orders. Here is a way to avoid getting into a contest of wills and still get the thing done that you want your child to do.

THE THINK SPACE

Tired of time-outs that don't work and punishments that fail to teach? Here's a way to manage the challenging behaviors of young children that gives them time and space to process their conflicts. This tool helps them focus on what TO do in the future rather than what NOT to do.

O.T.R. – OFF-TRAUMA RETRACKING

(Ten Seconds That Last A Lifetime)

Do you ever wonder why your corrections don't stick? Here is a way to help your child prepare himself on a deep inner level so that your guidance becomes something that your child actually wants to do. It's simple, yet amazingly effective.

MAGIC HANDLES

Twenty-one simple and practical handles that truly encourage cooperation in children. These are specific words and phrases that diffuse resistance while they encourage cooperation. Make your life with children truly enjoyable and as you learn proven expressions that inspire and motivate.

DOZENS OF OTHER STRATEGIES

Highly useable tools that encourage strong inner growth, a sense of personal responsibility, the development of empathy. You will learn to apply these positive tools in a wide variety of situations. Here's a safe, solid system that can help you find the success with children that you always wanted but didn't quite know how to achieve.

PARENT to PARENT . . .

Most of us see strong guidance as something we accomplish with disciplines such as as time-out, taking privileges away, scolding or spanking — all negative things. But, don't we also know that these methods fail to bring the results we want?

I, too, was searching for answers to these questions, and more, but did not know where to turn. Then I met Calvin and Carolyn. Using their positive techniques, I have not only learned to handle tough situations, I now have the tools to feel confident that I am doing the right things to help my child become a positive, responsible person.

I like Calvin and Carolyn because they mix compassion with firmness and wisdom with insight. Their methods work. My child and I are both better people because of our time with the Richerts.

We adults spend time and money learning to do all sorts of things — computers, taxes, crafts, etc. But, those skills can never benefit your child like this seminar series. Parents are starving for practical approaches to positive guidance . Your opportunity is here!
